

My Beloved Eric,

All my life I have searched for you, waited for you and now I have finally come home to you. I have found the one in who my soul delights, and it is You. I know that for us together to become all we can, each of us individually needs to continue to grow and thrive. I will do my best to nourish all of you, your physical body, your emotions and your spirit.

I love you, beyond words and beyond measure. I want to care for you and make you happy. To be there for you at the start and end of each day. To be by your side as we travel down life's twisted path together.

You are my love, you are my heart. You are my friend and my lover, partner and protector, my Husband and my Soul Mate. I give myself to you, body, mind, heart and soul, all of me. To be joined with all of you. My place is at your side. My home is where you are. Through the rest of this life and thereafter.

When I am with you I am at peace. I find comfort in your strength and solace in your arms. Just being near you soothes me in a way no one and nothing ever has.

I promise to love and cherish you, to honor and respect you, to care for you and let you take care of me.
I promise to trust in you, and have faith in you.
I promise to be honest with you and to be open to you, in all ways, to allow myself to simply be, to love and be loved.
I will support you to pursue your dreams and follow your heart.

When you are weary, take strength from me.
When you are sick, I promise to tend you.
When you talk, I will always listen, not just with my ears but with my heart.
When you are happy, I will rejoice with you.
When you hurt, I will hold you and help you.
When you need me, I will always be there for you.

By the life that courses within my blood and the love that resides within my heart, I take thee Eric to my hand, my heart, and my spirit, to be my chosen one. To desire thee and be desired by thee, to be possessed by thee, and possess thee. I promise to love thee wholly and completely without restraint. In sickness and in health, in plenty and in poverty, in life and beyond, where we shall meet, remember, and love again.